HAIR CLUTCHED IN HAND OF GIRL BRUTALLY SLAIN NEW CLUE IN THE MYSTERY

Victim of Spuyten Duyvil
Tragedy Probably Killed
With Iron Last.

THEN CUT WITH KNIFE.

Weapon Found Hidden at a Spot Twenty Feet From the Body.

Clenched in the stiffened hands of the young woman whose mutilated body was found shortly before midnight last night in one of the loneliest wooded spots at the extreme northern end of Manhattan island, within a few hundred feet of Spuyten Duyvil Creek, the police discovered today a very dark brown—just the kind of hair which might have been worn by the man who attacked and killed the girl.

These, with the discovery by an Evening World reporter of a shoemaker's iron last, bloodstained and dotted with hair and a home-made blackjack and a big jackknife, found by Mounted Police-man Charles F. Hughes, hidden beneath a pile of twigs and leaves, constituted the first clues to the girl's murder.

KNIFE CAREFULLY HIDDEN 20 FEET AWAY.

The iron last and blackjack were found after the police had made a protracted search of the neighborhood without coming on these implements. The knife was found several hours after the initial search also. It was carefully hidden and was about eighteen or twenty feet away from the body in the direction of the Hudson River. The knife is of cheap material and has an embossed handle. It is about five inches long and has one blade, four inches in length. Blade and handle were covered with blood stains and hair.

The blackjack was fashioned out of a piece of lead pipe about two and a half inches in diameter. Into one end of it was forced a stick of wood sufficiently to be used as a handle. The Evening World reporter who found this and the shoemaker's last discovered also a small piece of lace of the kind which might have adorned a woman's undershirt. The police made light of this discovery, as the clothes of the murdered woman appeared to be intact and undamaged.

Acting Capt. Herlihy, unclenched the girl's hands when he determined to move the body to the St. Nicholas avenue police station on his own initiative. Coroner Winterbottom sent word that he would forego the usual examination on the spot, and Assistant District Attorney Deacon Murphy, who had notified the police that he would visit the

EJECTED DINERS MAY SUE POLICE FOR OPPRESSION

District-Attorney's Office, After Court's Decision, Thinks Man
May Eat When He Pleases.

PROPRIETORS TO FIGHT

Leading Restaurants Will Follow Healy's Example and Refuse to Close at 1 A. M.

Restaurant keepers may continue to keep open after 1 A. M., providing their bars are closed and no drinks are served, according to members of the staff of District-Attorney Whitman, who have been investigating the case, following the decision of the Justices of the Court of Special Sessions that Thomas Healy, proprietor of Healy's restaurant at Columbus avenue and Sixty-sixth street, had violated no law in serving food after the police prescribed hour.

Although no definite statement was forthcoming, it is believed the District-Attorney's office will consider seriously a charge of oppression against any police officer who compels a diner to leave his meal merely because the hands of the clock have reached 1 A. M.

Should the police follow their announced determination to obey Mayor Gaynor's orders and drive all diners out of restaurants at 1 A. M., and arrest the proprietors, the District-Attorney's office, under the law, will be compelled to call the cases to the attention of the Court of Special Sessions, but before a trial is ordered the Justices will be reminded of their decision in the Healy case and asked whether they desire the trial to proceed.

COURT UNLIKELY TO HEAR SIMILAR CASES.

In view of their overwhelming and strongly expressed opinion that no law was violated by remaining open after 1 A. M., providing the bar is closed, it is not believed the Justices will agree to hear another similar case, unless it can be shown there was a law violation in keeping the bar open and serving drinks.

As the matter now stands, the District-Attorney's office is prevented from forcing any more restaurant keepers to trial for remaining open after Mayor Gaynor has said they must close.

"The Justices of the Court of Special Sessions have ruled, by their decision, that there was no violation of the law in the Healy case," said Assistant District Attorney James E. Smith, who tried the case. "The restaurant was running and the bar was closed, no drinks being served. The decision of the Justices is final. The State, of course, cannot appeal against a decision once it is rendered. Had the decision been against the proprietor, an appeal could have been made by the defendant, but the State is not allowed an appeal. The decision cannot be overturned in any way."

The action of the police in ordering diners to leave their meals and in threatening to throw them out unless they left is declared to be illegal. It was pointed out that sub-division G of section 20 of the Excise law, under which these cases have been brought, does not confer upon the police any power to eject diners, making the offense, if one is committed, a violation of the law against the proprietor and not on the part of the diner.

EJECTED PERSONS HAVE CAUSE FOR ACTION.

Lawyers declared to-day that if a diner refuses to leave his meal when

SHOT UP CASKET OF HAYTI'S RULER IN CHURCH CROWD

"Present Arms!" and "Guard of Honor" Poured Bullets
Into "Martyr's" Body.

SIXTY SOLDIERS FIRED.

Volleyed Followed Impressive
Funeral Ceremony, Says
American Who Attended.

The amazing story of the last rites over the body of the late President Tancred Auguste of Hayti was brought here to-day by the Hamburg-American liner Albatross. The story was told by Marfield Kemp, a civil engineer in the employ of the National Railroad of Hayti, here on a visit to his home at Lexington, Ind. Mr. Kemp will be a guest at the Hotel Astor for the next few days.

They have various ways of impeaching Presidents in Hayti, and there have been more Presidents in Hayti in a given time than in any other known republic in the world. The late Tancred Auguste was impeached by poison, delicately but deftly adjusted to his food. As such as he was dead, most elaborate arrangements were made for his funeral. If, indeed, they had not been made before his sudden taking off.

MILITARY TOOK CHARGE AFTER ELABORATE CHURCH CEREMONY.

As befitting to one of his rank, he was given a grand funeral in the cathedral in Port au Prince. After the church services it was arranged, a big military pageant was to take place and the late Auguste was to be buried with true military honors. Mr. Kemp was the only American in the church.

"It was truly a grand service," said the engineer. "The music and the singing were beautiful, their ceremonial most impressive. The air was heavy with incense and the solemn quiet of the big church lent dignity and awe to the occasion. The funeral oration was in French, and the late President received some tribute."

"At the conclusion of the oration, the rites of the church were completed and then the body was turned over to the military for burial. Ranged alongside of the handsome leaden casket, on either side, were six soldiers."

"All through the services they stood like statues, their sun-streaked uniforms on the floor. Now, from somewhere in the church, where the quiet was even disturbed by the slightest emotion, there came, in deep tones, the sharp military command:

"Present arms!"

"There was a slight stir in the church, then all was quiet, as the soldiers raised their guns, not to a present arm, but to their shoulders. Bang! and twelve bullets went tearing into the leaden casket.

"BANG!" AS TWELVE BULLETS ANSWERED COMMAND.

"I was pretty well up in the center of the church, eagerly intent on all the proceedings, and as the thunder of musketry went crashing through the stillness of the sacred edifice, I fell out of my seat. In a moment everybody was on his or her feet, and that wasn't all of it. In the church were fifty or sixty more soldiers, and as the guard of honor finished peppering the casket, their companions raised their guns and turned loose a volley toward the ceiling. I didn't wait for any more."

"The services attendant upon the funeral of a martyred President of Hayti were too much for my sensitive nerves. I think I must have cleared seventeen peeps in one jump, and I didn't stop until I was safe in the street. I expected to see the vast crowd coming pouring out of the cathedral, but there was no crowd. I heard women scream as I went, but then all was again quiet."

"It had all been the work of an instant. Then out from the sacred edifice came the slow, mournful strains of a dead march, played by the military band. The military band undoubtedly taken charge of the funeral for keeps. Out from the church marched the band and behind it the funeral cortege. Right along to the cemetery the cortege went, the mass of people following."

WANTED TO MAKE SURE TANCRÉD WAS DEAD.

They buried the late President, filled up the grave, fired three volleys above

POLO GROUNDS, NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—Only 2,000 fans saws the pastime to-day, but the few who were there made a noise like a multitude when Fritz Maisel, the $18,000 star from Baltimore, trotted out to play third base. In practice he was a bear cat and gave no signs that he was conscious of being a high priced man. Maisel is small in stature, and in his general actions reminds one of Kid Elberfeld. He is not as large as Elberfeld, however, but more of the order of Eddie Foster of Washington.

"Of course I know the fans are going to expect a lot of me," said young Fritz. "But if they give me time enough, I think I can hold down the job. If I don't I've got four or five brothers who can."

Caldwell was assigned to the pitching job against the Browns, and this necessitated a change in the outfield. Hartzell going to center, the job that Slim held down Saturday. Walter was benched. Levenson and Alexander made up the battery for the visitors.

FIRST INNING—Shotton was out on an easy tap to the box. Caldwell to Williams. Balenti flied out to Cree. Pratt, who has been hitting the ball in this series, kept up his good work, driving the ball into the left field bleachers for a home run. Caldwell the grave, and the band marched back to town, playing some lively, happy-go-lucky air. It was some funeral, asked only one man why the soldiers had fired into the casket, and with a shrug, he said:

"I suppose they wanted to be sure he was dead!"

George Givieux, Panamanian Consul-General to Hayti, was another passenger on the Albatross. He has been through several administrations in the noisy little republic. He did not criticize the recent administration, but said the Government was now in good hands in the person of Michel Oreste, the present President. Oreste is an intelligent and forceful man, who is endeavoring to straighten out the tangled financial affairs of the republic. Mr. Givieux was of the impression that Oreste will give the Haytians a fine administration.

ELOPE IN AUTO AFTER COURTSHIP ON TENNIS COURT

Grandson of "Quinine King"
Rushes Here From Sag Harbor for Hasty Wedding.

OFF TO CIRCLE GLOBE.

Flying Start of Weightmans
Is at "Little Church Around Corner."

William Weightman M., grandson of the "Quinine King of America," and his bride of a few hours, sat at a wedding breakfast in Shanley's, Forty-second street, to-day and gleefully told the few friends whom they had permitted to share the secret of their elopement just how happy they were and how by nightfall they would be on their way on a honeymoon tour around the world to last for two years. They laughed happily when one asked on what vessel they intended sailing, and their closest friends succeeded in learning no more than that they intended to start at once.

Young Weightman and his bride, who was Miss Mary Emily Powers of Shelby, Ia., motored into town from Sag Harbor, L. I., to-day, went straight to City Hall and thence to the "Little Church Around the Corner" and in next to no time were husband and wife.

H. E. Singer, a friend of the bridegroom, and Mrs. Ida E. Curley, who became devoted to Miss Powers while she was at Sag Harbor, motored in with the couple and attended them at the wedding. Then by long distance telephone they notified Mr. Weightman's mother, with whom he had been staying at Sag Harbor, and Miss Powers's aunt, Mrs. A. Frank Richardson, whose guest the young girl had been all summer.

It was at Sag Harbor that the young couple met, and it was across a tennis net that Weightman carried on his courtship. It is customary in scoring at tennis to employ the terms "fifteen or thirty love," frequently. Soon young Mr. Weightman was pronouncing them as though they should be written fifteen or thirty, "LOVE," and the plans for an elopement had been arranged.

Neither Mr. Weightman nor Miss Powers cared to consult their relatives. Not because they suspected any objections would be raised, but because they didn't want any delay which would prevent them from starting on their honeymoon while the season was just right for honeymooning, and so they chartered the auto and started to-day.

Weightman gave his age as twenty-two years at the License Bureau, and his residence as No. 90 West One Hundred and Sixty-eighth street. The bride said she was eighteen and lives at 109 West Seventy-fourth street.

BROKER HELD IN $10,000; STOLE $16,000, CHARGE

Got Possession of 20 Siegel-Cooper
Bonds, It Is Said, and Kept Them.

Gustav Nassauer, a broker, giving his address as No. 549 Riverside Drive, was arrested to-day on a charge of grand larceny, and in default of $10,000 bail set by Magistrate Barlow, was sent to the Tombs. He is charged with stealing twenty Siegel-Cooper bonds, valued at $16,000, from Harrison H. Harding, a real estate operator at the Hotel Imperial.

Hardinger, in his complaint, says that he sent the bonds to the broker's office on Aug. 8 by a clerk, Henry Marmon, and instructed the clerk to get a certified check for the amount. When the clerk delivered the bonds Nassauer, according to the charge, asked for time to show the bonds to a customer and left the office.

Since then repeated efforts have been made to get the bonds back, and Hardinger declares the broker refused to return them. His arrest followed.

NO MERCY FOR SULZER; FOES DETERMINED HE SHALL GO AT ONCE

Leaders Suddenly Determine to Impeach Him To-night If Enough
Assemblymen Can Be Found to Cast the Necessary Votes.

QUICK ACTION NECESSARY TO HEAD OFF DEFENSE.

Hennessy, the Governor's Investigator, Opens His Inquiry, but Falls to Draw Attention From Sulzer.

By Martin Green.
(Staff Correspondent of The Evening World.)

ALBANY, Aug. 11.—Legislators here for the resumption of the special session of the Legislature would not be surprised to see Governor Sulzer impeached by the Assembly to-night. Such a plan is under consideration by the powers that are running the machine and the only potent factor standing in the way of the accomplishment of the plan late this afternoon is the likelihood that there may not be enough assemblymen present to-night to furnish a majority vote for impeachment.

Eugene Lamb Richards, counsel to the Frawley committee; Senator Wagner, the Tammany leader in the upper house; Speaker Smith of the Assembly, and others remained in conference at Saratoga all day. Late this afternoon Aaron J. Levy, Tammany leader in the Assembly, was called by telephone from Saratoga and left Albany in a hurry, travelling by automobile. He went to meet Richards, Wagner, Smith and the others in consultation in Saratoga at the United States Hotel.

Gov. Sulzer was told late this afternoon that the combination over in Saratoga was fixing up a scheme to impeach him within a few hours.

"I am not worried about what they do," he said.

Evidence was unobtainable, according to the members of the committee, which shows the Governor to have committed offenses constituting the highest of impeachable proceedings. Therefore, it is concluded, inasmuch as the Legislature was within its rights in investigating the Governor's campaign funds, it follows in consequence that the investigation should continue to its logical conclusion.

"If the Governor has been shown to be unworthy of his office, must wait until the regular session begins in January to take steps to remove him," the Tammany leaders ask. On this point they held they were justified in bringing the impeachment proceedings now.

As an attack on the part of Gov. Sulzer's lieutenants to create a counter news attraction and thus lead the public away from the impeachment proceedings was begun to-day under the able supervision of John A. Hennessy, the Governor's chief probe into the delinquencies of Tammany officeholders and legislators. Mr. Hennessy inaugurated an investigation into the Department of Efficiency and Economy, a new branch of the government founded by the Governor which has fallen under Tammany influence.

The investigation failed to sidetrack the main issue.

From the Hennessy investigation it is established that the policy of the Governor is one of obstruction and delay. SULZER HAS TEN LAWYERS.

WITH BACON UNREPORTED.

Governor Sulzer is under the guidance of ten lawyers. Nine of them assisted him in getting out his statement last night. The tenth—Samuel M. Ordway—was unable to reach Albany in time. Undoubtedly other lawyers will be added to the Governor's army of counsel.

Alexander S. Bacon, who nominated William Sulzer in the convention at Rochester three years ago, hasn't reported.

The Governor is apparently calm and happy. He is the least worried, if outward signs are genuine, of all interested in the political controversy which has brought about a movement to displace him. He went about the business of his office to-day as placidly as though there was no scandal.

But it has been held by the Attorney-General that the Legislature was within its rights in special session when it inaugurated an investigation into the matter of election contributions and expenses which brought out the Sulzer scandal.

Extraordinary efforts are being made to round up as many Assemblymen as possible. Every Tammany man and up-State organization man has been ordered to be on hand. Of course if there is not a sufficient attendance the matter will have to go over until to-morrow.

The impression is general that a determined effort will be made to swing the impeachment at to-night's session if it takes until daylight. Some conservative leaders fear that such action might be construed as an attempt to railroad the Governor, but the men who are after him and want him removed say that his defense issued last night makes immediate action imperative.

Many good lawyers who have been consulted by the anti-Sulzer forces have given the opinion that the power of impeachment does not rest in a Legislature called in special session to act upon specific matters outlined by the Governor.

But it has been held by the Attorney-General that the Legislature was within its rights in special session when it inaugurated an investigation into the matter of election contributions and expenses which brought out the Sulzer scandal.
